I have this query which searches for items to be deleted... Item::where("id not in", \DB::table("orders_items_temp")->lists("id"))->delete(); It finds all the items and all the items that are in orders_items_temp table so it wont delete any orders. Now, I want to add some conditions to filter out those ids that are used in an orders_items_temp table too. I think it should be with some "where is not" query, like this Order::where("id not in", \DB::table("orders_items_temp")->lists("id"))->delete(); Any idea how to achieve this?

I'm totally lost right now. Thanks in advance! A: Try like this. //check if user is not in orders_items_temp $users = \App\User::whereNotIn('id', \DB::table('orders_items_temp')->lists('id'))->get(); //delete related orders_items_temp record Item::where("id", "!=" , \DB::table("orders_items_temp")->lists("id")->toArray())->delete(); 5 keys to inspiring success May 13, 2017 Being good isn't good enough. I was listening to a talk where the speaker was talking about the theory behind web-socket communication. He mentioned that there are cases where they are called just like callbacks; where you get the data as a parameter of the function. Which means that instead of sending the data on the socket directly, you would send it through some parameter. I am wondering if this is a good practice. What are the pros and cons of doing it? A: There is no real problem with the previous architecture that you are describing. Its use is perfectly fine. However, its main drawback is in the way of binary compatibility between server and client. When you use callbacks you can transmit binary data between client and server without problems. However, if the client and server communicate with different protocol versions - e.g. if you want to migrate old clients to new protocol version, the calls to the callbacks will break the old protocol. You are not the first one dealing with this issue: You can use messages or you can switch to binary messages without callbacks and you will be able to both transmit and receive the binary data over the socket safely even if the client does not support the protocol. Q: installing solrj with maven i have a problem to install solrj via maven. The solr server runs, but when i try to use the SolrJ library in the maven project i get the "cannot resolve symbol ServletException" in the following line: SolrDocumentList documentList = SolrClient.search(query, "file:///"); 3e33713323
